The concert begins with Beethoven, Dr. Christopher M. Cicconi, Conductor and Music Director of the Warren Philharmonic Orchestra states in the program notes: Beethoven was commissioned to write incidental music for Wolfgang von Goethe's interpretation of Count Egmont's 16th-century struggle for Dutch independence against the autocratic imperial rule of Spain.

Richard Wagner's Siegfried Idyll was an intimate musical gift to his wife, Cosima, for her 33rd birthday and the first Christmas after their son Siegfried's birth.

The French composer Emmanuel Chabrier wrote a very beautiful, work for piano called Habanera. Later he reworked the music and orchestrated it in 1888, producing a lovely miniature for orchestra.

Mendelssohn went to Italy in October 1830. His impressions of the trip resulted in the present Symphony. The work strives more to convey a series of impressions of Italy—Mediterranean sunshine, religious solemnity, monumental art and architecture, and open countryside.

The full program notes are available on the Warren Philharmonic Orchestra website.
